

Complaints Handling Procedure for Paisley South Property Services

Issued: September 2021

Review date: September 2026

Foreword

Paisley South Property Services (PSPS) is a subsidiary of Paisley Housing Association and it has adopted the same principles for dealing with complaints handling i.e. using the SPSO's model complaints handling procedures for registered social landlords but with the final redress for complainers being the First Tier Tribunal and not the SPSO.

Our Complaints Handling Procedure reflects PSPS's commitment to valuing complaints. It seeks to resolve customer dissatisfaction as close as possible to the point of service delivery and to conduct thorough, impartial and fair investigations of customer complaints so that, where appropriate, we can make evidence-based decisions on the facts of the case.

We have tried to produce a standard approach to handling complaints across the housing sector, which complies with guidance on a model complaints handling procedure. This procedure aims to help us 'get it right first time'. We want quicker, simpler and more streamlined complaints handling with local, early resolution by capable, well-trained staff.

Complaints give us valuable information we can use to improve customer satisfaction. Our complaints handling procedure will enable us to address a customer's dissatisfaction and may also prevent the same problems that led to the complaint from happening again. For our staff, complaints provide a first-hand account of the service user's views and experience and can highlight problems we may otherwise miss. Handled well, complaints can give our customers a form of redress when things go wrong and can also help us continuously improve our services.

Resolving complaints early saves money and creates better customer relations. Sorting them out as close to the point of service delivery as possible means we can deal with them locally and quickly, so they are less likely to escalate to the next stage of the procedure. Complaints that we do not resolve swiftly can greatly add to our workload.

The complaints handling procedure will help us do our job better, improve relationships with our service users and enhance public perception of PSPS. It will help us keep the customer at the heart of the process, while enabling us to better understand how to improve our services by learning from complaints.

How to use this Model Complaints Handling Procedure

This document explains to staff how to handle complaints. Another document provides information for customers on the complaints procedure. Together, these form our complaints handling procedure (CHP).

It is designed to be an internal document for each organisation to adopt. It contains references and links to more details on parts of the procedure, such as how to record complaints, and the criteria for signing off and agreeing time extensions. These explain how to process, manage and reach decisions on different types of complaints.

What is a complaint?

PSPS's definition of a complaint is:

'An expression of dissatisfaction by one or more members of the public about PSPS's action or lack of action, or about the standard of service provided by or on behalf of PSPS.'

A complaint may relate to:

failure to provide a service inadequate standard of service dissatisfaction with PSPS policy disagreement with a decision where the customer cannot use another procedure (for example an appeal) to resolve the matter treatment by or attitude of a member of staff

PSPS's failure to follow the appropriate administrative process delays in responding to enquiries and requests.

This list does not cover everything. For example, complaints may also be about:

unfairness, bias or prejudice in service delivery

failure to follow procedures

lack of provision, or the provision of misleading, unsuitable or incorrect advice or information

a repair that has not been carried out properly unacceptable behaviour by a member of staff, a Board member or a contractor.

Appendix 1 provides a range of examples of complaints we may receive, and how these may be handled.

A complaint is not:

a routine first-time request for a service

a request for compensation only issues that are in court or have already been heard by a court or a tribunal an appeal against a decision where there is an established appeal route; these should be heard through the appropriate appeal process an attempt to reopen a previously concluded complaint or to have a complaint reconsidered where we have already given our final decision.

You should not treat these issues as complaints and should instead direct customers to use the appropriate procedures.

Appendix 2 gives more examples of 'what is not a complaint' and how to direct customers appropriately. This includes an example of when an anti social behaviour complaint may and may not be considered a complaint.

Handling anonymous complaints

We value all complaints. This means we treat all complaints including anonymous complaints seriously and will take action to consider them further, wherever this is appropriate. Generally, we will consider anonymous complaints if there is enough information in the complaint to enable us to make further enquiries. If, however, an anonymous complaint does not provide enough information to enable us to take further action, we may decide not to pursue it. Any decision not to pursue an anonymous complaint must be authorised by a senior manager.

If an anonymous complaint makes serious allegations, we will refer it to a senior officer immediately.

If we pursue an anonymous complaint further, we will record the issues as an anonymous complaint on the complaints system. This will help to ensure the completeness of the complaints data we record and allow us to take corrective action where appropriate.

What if the customer doesn't want to complain?

If a customer has expressed dissatisfaction in line with our definition of a complaint but does not want to complain, tell them that we do consider all expressions of dissatisfaction, and that customer complaints offer us the opportunity to improve services where things have gone wrong. Encourage the customer to submit their complaint and allow us to deal with it through the CHP. This will ensure that the customer is updated on the action taken and gets a response to their complaint.

If, however, the customer insists they do not wish to complain, record the issue as an anonymous complaint. This will ensure that the customer's details are not recorded on the complaints database, and that they receive no further contact about the matter. It will also help to ensure the completeness of the complaints data recorded and will still allow us to fully consider the matter and take corrective action where appropriate. Please refer to the example in Appendix 1 for further guidance.

Who can make a complaint?

Anyone who receives, requests or is affected by our services can make a complaint. This obviously includes our owners. It also includes a member of the public who could have access to or be affected by our services, including our anti social behaviour and estate management services. All these people are PSPS's customers.

Sometimes a customer may be unable or reluctant to make a complaint on their own. We will accept complaints brought by third parties as long as the customer has given their personal consent. These complaints are treated in the same way as any other, regardless of who has brought the complaint.

Complaints involving more than one service or organisation

If a complaint relates to the actions of two or more of our services, you must tell the customer who will take the lead in dealing with the complaint and explain that they will get only one response covering all issues raised.

If a customer complains to us about the service of another agency or public service provider, but we have no involvement in the issue, you should advise the customer to contact that organisation directly.

If the complaint relates to one of our services and includes one or more of our contractors, we would normally deal with the complaint, however, depending on circumstances we may agree with the contractor who will take the lead. Where this happens, we will work together to investigate all the matters simultaneously, in line with this CHP. You must also tell the customer who will take the lead in dealing with the complaint and explain that they will receive only one response covering all issues raised.

However, if a complaint relates to our service and the service of another agency or public service provider (for example a local authority or a government department), and we have a direct interest in the issue, you must handle the complaint about our service through the CHP. If you need to make enquiries to an outside agency in relation to the complaint always take account of data protection legislation and our guidance on handling our customers' personal information. The Information Commissioner has detailed guidance on data sharing and has issued a data sharing code of practice.

Such complaints may include:

- a complaint to us about anti social behaviour that relates to our service and a local authority service.

Significant performance failures

The Scottish Housing Regulator (SHR) has a duty to consider issues raised with them about 'significant performance failures'. A significant performance failure is defined by the SHR as something that a landlord does or fails to do that puts the interests of its tenants at risk, and which the landlord has not resolved. This is something that is a systemic problem that does, or could, affect all of a landlord's tenants. A significant performance failure happens when:

- a landlord is not delivering the outcomes and standards in the Scottish Social Housing Charter over a period of time; or
- a landlord is not achieving the regulatory standards on governance or financial management.

Where the factoring service is an integral part of the RSL's business then Owners may have recourse to the SHR regarding what they consider a Significant Performance Failure.

The complaints handling process

Our CHP aims to provide a quick, simple and streamlined process for resolving complaints early and locally by capable, well-trained staff.

Our complaints process provides two opportunities to resolve complaints internally:

1. frontline resolution, and
2. investigation.

For clarity, the term 'frontline resolution' refers to the first stage of the complaints process. It does not reflect any job description within PSPS but means seeking to resolve complaints at the initial point of contact where possible.

Stage one: frontline resolution

Frontline resolution aims to quickly resolve straightforward customer complaints that require little or no investigation. Any member of staff may deal with complaints at this stage.

The main principle is to seek early resolution, resolving complaints at the earliest opportunity and as close to the point of service delivery as possible. This may mean a face-to-face discussion with the customer, or asking an appropriate member of staff to deal directly with the complaint.

Appendix 1 gives examples of the types of complaint we may consider at this stage, with suggestions on how to resolve them.

In practice, frontline resolution means resolving the complaint at the first point of contact with the customer, either by the member of staff receiving the complaint or other identified staff.

In either case, you may settle the complaint by providing an on-the-spot apology where appropriate, or explaining why the issue occurred and, where possible, what will be done to stop this happening again. You may also explain that, as an organisation that values complaints, we may use the information given when we review service standards in the future.

A customer can make a complaint in writing, in person, by telephone, by email or online, or by having someone complain on their behalf. You should always consider frontline resolution, regardless of how you have received the customer's complaint.

What to do when you receive a complaint

- 1 On receiving a complaint, you must first decide whether the issue can indeed be defined as a complaint. The customer may express dissatisfaction about more than one issue. This may mean you should treat one element as a complaint, while directing the customer to pursue another element through an alternative route (see Appendix 2).
 - 2 If you have received and identified a complaint, record the details on our complaints system.
 - 3 Next, decide whether or not the complaint is suitable for frontline resolution. Some complaints will need to be fully investigated before you can give the customer a suitable response. You must escalate these complaints immediately to the investigation stage.
 - 4 Where you think frontline resolution is appropriate, you must consider four key questions:
 - What exactly is the customer's complaint (or complaints)?
 - What does the customer want to achieve by complaining?
 - Can I achieve this, or explain why not?
 - If I can't resolve this, who can help with frontline resolution?

What exactly is the customer's complaint (or complaints)?

It is important to be clear about exactly what the customer is complaining of. You may need to ask the customer for more information and probe further to get a full picture.

What does the customer want to achieve by complaining?

At the outset, clarify the outcome the customer wants. Of course, the customer may not be clear about this, and you may need to probe further to find out what they expect, and whether they can be satisfied.

Can I achieve this, or explain why not?

If you can achieve the expected outcome by providing an on-the-spot apology, or explain why you can't achieve what the customer wants, you should do so. If you consider an apology is appropriate, you may wish to follow the SPSO's guidance on the subject:

SPSO guidance on apology

The customer may expect more than we can provide. If so, you must tell them as soon as possible. An example would be where the customer is so dissatisfied with a kitchen refurbishment that they demand a new kitchen, but we are only willing to repair any broken units.

You are likely to have to convey the decision face to face or on the telephone. If you do so face to face, by telephone or by email, you are not required to write to the customer as well, although you may choose to do so or the customer may ask you to. It is important, however, to keep a full and accurate record of the decision reached and passed to the customer.

If I can't resolve this, who can help with frontline resolution?

If you cannot deal with the complaint because, for example, you are unfamiliar with the issues or area of service involved, you should be able to pass details of the complaint immediately to someone who can attempt to resolve it.

Timelines

Frontline resolution should be completed within five working days, although in practice we would often expect to resolve the complaint much sooner.

You may need to get more information from other services to resolve the complaint at this stage. However, it is important to respond to the customer within five working days, either resolving the matter or explaining that their complaint is to be investigated.

Extension to the timeline

In exceptional circumstances, where there are clear and justifiable reasons for doing so, you may agree an extension of no more than five working days with the customer. This must only happen when an extension will make it more likely that the complaint will be resolved at the frontline resolution stage.

When you ask for an extension, you must get authorisation from the appropriate senior manager, who will decide whether you need an extension to effectively resolve the complaint. Examples of when this may be appropriate include staff or contractors being temporarily unavailable. If, however, the issues are so complex that they cannot be resolved in five days, it may be more appropriate to escalate the complaint straight to the investigation stage. You must tell the customer about the reasons for the delay, and when they can expect your response.

If the customer does not agree to an extension but it is unavoidable and reasonable, a senior manager should decide on the extension. You must then tell the customer about the delay and explain the reason for the decision to grant the extension.

It is important that such extensions do not become the norm. Rather, the timeline at the frontline resolution stage should be extended only rarely. All attempts to resolve the complaint at this stage must take no longer than ten working days from the date you receive the complaint.

The proportion of complaints that exceed the five-day limit will be evident from reported statistics. These statistics go to our Senior Management Team and Board on a quarterly basis.

Appendix 3 provides further information on timelines.

Closing the complaint at frontline resolution stage

When you have informed the customer of the outcome, you are not obliged to write to the customer, although you may choose to do so, or the customer may ask you to. You must ensure that our response to the complaint addresses all areas that we are responsible for and explains the reasons for our decision. It is also important to keep a full and accurate record of the decision reached and given to the customer. The complaint should then be closed and the complaints system updated accordingly.

When to escalate to the investigation stage

A complaint should be escalated to the investigation stage when:

- frontline resolution was tried but the customer remains dissatisfied and requests an investigation into the complaint. This may be immediately on communicating the decision at the frontline stage or could be some time later (in which case the complaint will need to be re-opened on receipt of the request for investigation)
- the customer refuses to take part in the frontline resolution process
- the issues raised are complex and will require detailed investigation
- the complaint relates to serious, high risk or high profile issues.

When a previously closed complaint is escalated from the frontline resolution stage, the complaint should be re-opened on the complaints system.

Take particular care to identify complaints that might be considered serious, high risk or high profile, as these may require particular action or raise critical issues that need senior management's direct input. The SPSO defines potential high risk or high profile complaints as those that may:

- involve a death or terminal illness
- involve serious service failure, for example major delays in providing, or repeated failures to provide, a service
- generate significant and ongoing press interest
- pose a serious risk to our operations
- present issues of a highly sensitive nature, for example concerning:
 - immediate homelessness
 - a particularly vulnerable person
 - child protection.

Stage two: investigation

Not all complaints are suitable for frontline resolution and not all complaints will be satisfactorily resolved at that stage. Complaints handled at the investigation stage of the CHP are typically complex or require a detailed examination before we can state our position. These complaints may already have been considered at frontline resolution stage, or they may have been identified from the start as needing immediate investigation.

An investigation aims to establish all the facts relevant to the points made in the complaint and to give the customer a full, objective and proportionate response that represents our final position.

What to do when you receive a complaint for investigation

It is important to be clear from the start of the investigation stage exactly what you are investigating, and to ensure that both the customer and service understand the investigation's scope.

It may be helpful to discuss and confirm these points with the customer at the outset, to establish why they are dissatisfied and whether the outcome they are looking for sounds realistic. In discussing the complaint with the customer, you should consider three key questions:

1. What specifically is the customer's complaint or complaints?
2. What does the customer want to achieve by complaining?
3. Are the customer's expectations realistic and achievable?

It may be that the customer expects more than we can provide. If so, you must make this clear to the customer as soon as possible.

Where possible you should also clarify what additional information you will need to investigate the complaint. The customer may need to provide more evidence to help us reach a decision.

Details of the complaint must be recorded on the system for recording complaints. Where appropriate, this will be done as a continuation of the frontline resolution action. The details must be updated when the investigation ends.

If the investigation stage follows attempted frontline resolution, you must hand over all case notes and associated information to the officer responsible for the investigation, and record that you have done so.

Timelines

The following deadlines apply to cases at the investigation stage:

- complaints must be acknowledged within three working days
 - you should provide a full response to the complaint as soon as possible but not later than 20 working days from the time you received the complaint for investigation.

Extension to the timeline

Not all investigations will be able to meet this deadline. For example, some complaints are so complex that they require careful consideration and detailed investigation beyond the 20-day limit. However, these would be the exception and you must always try to deliver a final response to a complaint within 20 working days.

If there are clear and justifiable reasons for extending the timescale, senior management will set time limits on any extended investigation, as long as the customer agrees. You must keep the customer updated on the reason for the delay and give them a revised timescale for completion. If the customer does not agree to an extension but it is unavoidable and reasonable, then senior management should consider and confirm the extension. The reasons for an extension might include the following:

- essential accounts or statements, crucial to establishing the circumstances of the case, are needed from staff, customers or others but they cannot help because of long-term sickness or leave
- you cannot obtain further essential information within normal timescales
- operations are disrupted by unforeseen or unavoidable operational circumstances, for example industrial action or severe weather
- the customer has agreed to mediation as a potential route for resolution.

These are only a few examples, and you must judge the matter in relation to each complaint. However, an extension would be the exception and you must always try to deliver a final response to the complaint within 20 working days.

As with complaints considered at the frontline stage, the proportion of complaints that exceed the 20-day limit will be evident from reported statistics. These statistics must go to our Senior Management Team and Board on a quarterly basis.

Appendix 3 provides further information on timelines.

Mediation

Some complex complaints, or complaints where customers and other interested parties have become entrenched in their position, may require a different approach. Where appropriate, you may consider using services such as mediation or conciliation using suitably trained and qualified mentors to try to resolve the matter, and to reduce the risk of the complaint escalating further.

Mediation may help both parties to understand what has caused the complaint, and so is more likely to result in mutually satisfactory solutions.

If you and the customer agree to mediation, revised timescales will need to be agreed.

Closing the complaint at the investigation stage

You must let the customer know the outcome of the investigation, in writing or by their preferred method of contact. Our response to the complaint must address all areas that we are responsible for and explain the reasons for our decision. You must record the decision, and details of how it was communicated to the customer, on the system for recording complaints. You must also make clear to the customer:

- their right to take their complaint to the First Tier Tribunal
- the time limit for doing so, and
- how to contact the First tier Tribunal

Independent external review

Once the investigation stage has been completed, the customer has the right to approach the First Tier Tribunal if they remain dissatisfied.

The First Tier Tribunal considers complaints from people who remain dissatisfied at the conclusion of our complaints procedure. The First Tier Tribunal looks at issues such as service failure and maladministration (administrative fault), as well as the way we have handled the complaint.

Information about the First Tier Tribunal

The First Tier Tribunal is the final stage for complaints about factoring services in Scotland. This includes complaints about Scottish housing associations or co-operatives. If you remain dissatisfied with a housing association or co-operative after its complaints process, you can ask the First Tier Tribunal to look at your complaint. The First Tier Tribunal cannot normally look at complaints:

where you have not gone all the way through PSPS's complaints handling procedure more than 12 months after you became aware of the matter you want to complain about, or that have been or are being considered in court.

Governance of the Complaints Handling Procedure

Roles and responsibilities

Overall responsibility and accountability for the management of complaints lies with the Chief Executive and the senior management team and The Board.

Our final position on the complaint is signed off by an appropriate senior manager and we will confirm that this is our final response. This ensures that our senior management own and are accountable for the decision. It also reassures the customer that their concerns have been taken seriously.

Board: As the governing body with responsibility for overseeing our work, our Board must provide leadership and strategic guidance. It will also have overall control of our affairs and ensure compliance with our policies and procedures.

In relation to complaints, its role is threefold:

- to approve the adoption of the CHP
- to ensure that staff keep to this CHP and associated internal processes (through involvement with senior management).
- to ensure that information and learning from complaints are used to improve our understanding of, and to steer, our policies and practices.

Particularly important is the Board's role in developing and fostering a culture that values complaints. The Board must ensure that recording and reporting of complaints is thorough and effective, so that reports to board reflect a true picture of all complaints.

A Board that values complaints will:

- support all staff in resolving complaints locally, quickly and effectively, to reduce the potential for a complaint to escalate
- encourage frontline staff to be 'active listeners' and to understand and act on the information they receive
- set out how complaints data will be reported and used to promote continual improvement
- ensure that tenants and other customers are kept informed about how we have used feedback to improve services.

Chief Executive The Chief Executive provides leadership and direction in ways that guide and enable us to perform effectively across all services. This includes ensuring that there is an effective CHP, with a robust investigation process that demonstrates how we learn from the complaints we receive. The Chief Executive may take a direct role in all or some complaints, or may delegate responsibility for the CHP to senior staff. Regular management reports will assure the Chief Executive of the quality of complaints performance.

Senior managers: On the Chief Executive's behalf, senior managers may be responsible for:

- managing complaints and the way we learn from them
- ensuring that recording and reporting on complaints is thorough and effective
- overseeing the implementation of actions required as a result of a complaint
- investigating complaints
- deputising for the Chief Executive on occasion.

However, senior managers may decide to delegate some elements of complaints handling (such as investigations and drafting of response letters) to other senior staff. Where this happens, senior managers should retain ownership and accountability for the management and reporting of complaints. They may also be responsible for preparing and signing decision letters to customers, so they should be satisfied that the investigation is complete and their response addresses all aspects of the complaint.

All our staff: A complaint may be made to any member of our staff. So all staff must be aware of the CHP and how to handle and record complaints at the frontline stage. They should also be aware of who to refer a complaint to, in case they are unable to personally handle the matter. We encourage all staff to try to resolve complaints early, as close to the point of service delivery as possible, and quickly to prevent escalation.

Complaints about senior staff or committee members

Complaints about senior staff or committee members can be difficult to handle, as there may be a conflict of interest for the staff investigating the complaint.

When serious complaints are raised against senior staff or committee members, it is particularly important that the investigation is conducted by an individual who is independent of the situation. The SHR specifies that a serious complaint against senior staff or the governing body of PSPS is a 'notifiable event', and as such the regulator must be informed immediately. It has also drawn up 'regulatory expectations' for the handling of serious complaints against the Chief Executive. This specifies that we must seek independent, professional advice to support us in handling, and in some cases investigating, the complaint.

The SHR's expectations also specify that strong governance arrangements must be in place that set out clear procedures for handling such complaints, including the governing body's role in such cases. Our processes specify the measures in place to ensure this is achieved, and the types of complaints we consider 'serious'.

We also have arrangements for handling minor complaints against the Chief Executive and for complaints against other senior staff and the governing body. These arrangements take account of the need to ensure that the final decision is fair, objective and impartial.

[Appropriate measures for dealing with such complaints will depend on the PSPS's size. Larger PSPSs may find it easier to allocate the complaint to a suitably senior member of staff not involved in the complaint. However, PSPSs with a small staff team may wish to come to an agreement with another, similar PSPS to provide reciprocal arrangements for investigating complaints where a conflict of interest is a concern. Alternatively they could seek advice from an employer's support organisation.]

The SHR's Regulatory Expectations on serious complaints against a Chief Executive can be found on the SHR website.

Recording, reporting, learning and publicising

Complaints provide valuable customer feedback. One of the aims of the CHP is to identify opportunities to improve services across our business. We must record all complaints in a systematic way so that we can use the complaints data for analysis and management reporting. By recording and using complaints information in this way, we can identify and address the causes of complaints and, where appropriate, identify training opportunities and introduce service improvements.

Recording complaints

To collect suitable data it is essential to record all complaints in line with the First Tier Tribunal's minimum requirements, as follows:

- the customer's name and address
- the date the complaint was received
- the nature of the complaint
- how the complaint was received (for example by email, post etc)
- the service the complaint refers to
- the date the complaint was closed at the frontline resolution stage (where appropriate)
- the date the complaint was escalated to the investigation stage (where appropriate)
- action taken at the investigation stage (where appropriate)
- the outcome of the complaint at each stage
- the date the complaint was closed at the investigation stage (where appropriate)
- the underlying cause of the complaint and any remedial action taken.

We have structured systems for recording complaints, their outcomes and any resulting action. These provide a detailed record of services that have failed to satisfy customers.

Reporting of complaints

Complaints details are analysed for trend information to ensure we identify service failures and take appropriate action. Regularly reporting the analysis of complaints information helps to inform management of where services need to improve. It will also help us report efficiently on the Annual Return on the Charter (the ARC).

We publish on a quarterly basis in newsletters, on our website and in our office the outcome of complaints and the actions we have taken in response. This demonstrates the improvements resulting from complaints and shows that complaints can influence our services. It also helps ensure transparency in our complaints handling service and will demonstrate to our customers that we value complaints.

We must:

- publicise on a quarterly basis complaints outcomes, trends and actions taken
- use case studies and examples to demonstrate how complaints have helped improve services.

This information is reported quarterly to our both our senior management team and the Board.

Learning from complaints

At the earliest opportunity after the closure of the complaint, the complaint handler makes sure that the service user and staff of the department involved understand the findings of the investigation and any recommendations made.

Senior management and the board will regularly review the information gathered from complaints and consider whether our services could be improved or internal policies and procedures updated.

As a minimum, we must:

- use complaints data to identify the root cause of complaints
- take action to reduce the risk of recurrence
- record the details of corrective action in the complaints file
- systematically review complaints performance reports to improve service delivery.

Where we have identified the need for service improvement:

- the action needed to improve services should be authorised
- a staff member (or team) must be designated as the 'owner' of the issue, with responsibility for ensuring the action is taken
- a target date must be set for the action
- the designated individual must follow up to ensure that the action happens within the agreed timescale
- where appropriate, performance in the service area must be monitored to ensure that the issue has been resolved
- we must ensure that staff and the Board members all learn from complaints.

Publicising complaints performance information

We also report our performance in handling complaints to the SHR, through the ARC. This includes performance statistics showing the volumes and types of complaints and key performance details, for example on the time taken and the stage at which complaints were resolved.

Maintaining confidentiality

Confidentiality is important in complaints handling. This includes maintaining the customer's confidentiality and explaining to them the importance of confidentiality generally. We must always bear in mind legal requirements, for example, data protection legislation, as well as internal policies on confidentiality and the use of customers' information.

Managing unacceptable behaviour

People may act out of character in times of trouble or distress. The circumstances leading to a complaint may result in the customer acting in an unacceptable way. Customers who have a history of challenging or inappropriate behaviour, or have difficulty expressing themselves, may still have a legitimate grievance.

A customer's reasons for complaining may contribute to the way in which they present their complaint. Regardless of this, we must treat all complaints seriously and properly assess them. However, we also recognise that the action of customers who are angry, demanding or persistent may result in unreasonable demands on time and resources or unacceptable behaviour towards our staff. We will, therefore, apply our policies and procedures to protect staff from unacceptable behaviour such as unreasonable persistence, threats or offensive behaviour from customers.

Where we decide to restrict access to a customer under the terms of an unacceptable actions policy, we have a procedure in place to communicate that decision, notify the customer of a right of appeal, and review any decision to restrict contact with us. We will allow the customer to demonstrate a more reasonable approach later. We must also make clear to the customer that they can still request other services such as repairs while their access is restricted.

PSPSs may take into consideration the SPSO's policy on Unacceptable Actions in reviewing and updating their own unacceptable actions policy.

Supporting the customer

All members of the community have the right to equal access to our CHP. Customers who do not have English as a first language may need help with interpretation and translation services, and other customers may have specific needs that we will seek to address to ensure easy access to the CHP.

We must always take into account our commitment and responsibilities to equality. This includes making reasonable adjustments to our service to help the customer where appropriate.

Several support and advocacy groups are available to support customers in pursuing a complaint and customers should be signposted to these as appropriate.

Time limit for making complaints

This model CHP sets a time limit of six months from when the customer first knew of the problem, within which time they may ask us to consider the complaint, unless there are special circumstances for considering complaints beyond this time.

We will apply this time limit with discretion. In decision making we will take account of the Scottish Public Services Ombudsman Act 2002 (Section 10(1)), which sets out the time limit within which a member of the public can normally ask the First Tier Tribunal to consider complaints. The limit is one year from when the person first knew of the problem they are complaining about, unless there are special circumstances for considering complaints beyond this time.

If it is clear that a decision not to investigate a customer's complaint will lead to a request for external review of the matter, we may decide that this satisfies the special circumstances criteria. This will enable us to consider the complaint and try to resolve it.

Appendix 1 – Complaints at frontline resolution

The following tables give examples of complaints that may be considered at the frontline stage, and suggests possible actions to achieve resolution.

Complaint	Possible actions to achieve resolution
The customer complains that her factoring payment direct debit has been set up wrongly.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Apologise to the customer and resolve the issue by properly updating the direct debit details.• Record the complaint on the complaints database.
The customer complains that a worker did not attend to carry out a housing repair as we had agreed.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Speak to the worker, the service or the service manager to explain the customer's complaint and to agree how to resolve the issue, for example by arranging a new time and date to do the repair.• Explain the reasons for the failed appointment and apologise to the customer.• Record the complaint on the complaints database.
The customer complains that the quality of a repair carried out by us or our contractor is not satisfactory.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Ask the service department to examine the repair to assess whether or not it is acceptable.• If it is not acceptable, agree that the service department should do more work to resolve the matter.• Explain and apologise to the customer.• Record the complaint on the complaints database.• Obtain a report from the service or contractor to confirm that the repair is now complete.• Feed back the lessons learned from the complaint into a service improvement plan.

Complaint	Possible actions to achieve resolution
The customer complains that An Officer turned up late and was smoking.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Contact the manager to discuss the matter. • The Manager checks the timetable for visits and discusses with the Officer the complaint about smoking. • You in turn contact the customer to explain the policy, confirm the timing of visits (for example. between 8am and 12 noon) and where appropriate apologise for the inconvenience. • Record the complaint on the complaints database.
The customer expresses dissatisfaction in line with the definition of a complaint, but says she doesn't want to complain – just wants to tell us about the matter.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Tell the customer that we value complaints because they help to improve services. Encourage her to submit the complaint. • To improve our service and learn from mistakes, we need to record, evaluate and act upon customer feedback like this. Therefore, if the customer still insists she does not want to complain, record the matter as an anonymous complaint. This will avoid breaching the complaints handling procedure. Reassure the customer that she will not be contacted again about the matter.
Dissatisfaction with a planned maintenance programme	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Take details of the complaint and pass them to the team involved in planned maintenance. Tell the customer about the timescales for planning such work, and that we will take their views into account for future work. • Record the complaint on the complaints database.

Appendix 2 - What is not a complaint

A concern may not necessarily be a complaint. For example, a customer might make a routine first-time request for a service. This is not a complaint, but the issue may escalate into a complaint if it is not handled effectively and the customer has to keep asking for service.

A customer may also be concerned about the various decisions we make. These decisions may have their own specific review or appeal procedures, and, where appropriate, we should direct customers to the relevant procedure. However, if a customer expresses dissatisfaction with the administrative process we have followed to arrive at a decision, we should treat this as a complaint. This distinction is shown in the example below about how an allocations policy applies.

The following paragraphs provide examples of the types of issues or concerns that should not be handled through the complaints handling procedure. This is not a full list, and you should decide the best route for resolution based on the individual case.

Example 1: Claims for compensation

A customer may seek compensation from us if they consider us liable. This includes issues such as personal injury or loss of or damage to property. Claims for compensation only are not complaints, so you should not handle them through the complaints handling procedure. However, where a customer wants to complain about the matter leading to their request for compensation, for example workmen damaging their home, you may consider that matter as a complaint, but deal with the request for compensation separately. You may decide to suspend complaint action pending the outcome of the claim for compensation. If you do this, you should notify the customer and explain that the complaint will be fully considered when the compensation claim has been resolved.

If you receive a compensation claim, you should explain to the customer the process for seeking resolution in line with our policy on these claims.

You can still make 'time and trouble' payments for inconvenience suffered by customers, in line with our policy on such matters. This is distinct from compensation claims.

Example 2: Anti social behaviour complaints

We must respond well to concerns or dissatisfaction about our tenants' behaviour from a neighbour or a member of the public (for example, a home owner living near by). We initially handle such concerns through our [anti social behaviour or neighbour relations] policy. However, someone may complain about the way we have handled an anti social behaviour complaint.

Mr A complains that his neighbour has been playing music late at night for the last three nights. This is the first time he has phoned to complain.

We should handle this through our anti social behaviour policy. We should fully explain our process to Mr A, and say what he should do if the situation continues.

Ms B complains she has reported her neighbour's barking dog several times over the last year, and nothing has been done about it.

We should handle this as a complaint and pass it to the right team to establish what has happened so far and update Ms B. We should consider whether we applied our policy properly, and whether we could do anything else to resolve the situation. We should record the complaint on the complaints system.

Appendix 3 - Timelines

General

Reference to timelines throughout the CHP relate to working days. When measuring performance against the required timelines, we do not count non-working days, for example weekends and public holidays.

Timelines at frontline resolution

You should aim to achieve frontline resolution within five working days. The day you receive the complaint is day 1. Where you receive it on a non-working day, for example at the weekend or on a public holiday, day 1 will be the next working day.

[The date of receipt will be determined by the PSPS's usual arrangements for receiving and dating of mail and other correspondence.]

Extension to the five-day timeline

If you have extended the timeline at the frontline resolution stage in line with the procedure, the revised timetable for the response must take no longer than 10 working days from the date of receiving the complaint.

Acknowledgement issued within three working days

Exceptionally you may need longer than the 20-day limit for a full response. If so, you should explain the reasons to the customer, and agree with them a revised timescale.

Timeline examples

The following illustration provides examples of the point at which we conclude our consideration of a complaint. It is intended to show the different stages and times at which a complaint may be resolved.

The circumstances of each complaint are explained below:

Complaint 1 – is straightforward and we can resolve it by an on-the-spot explanation and, if appropriate, an apology. Such a complaint can be resolved on day 1.

Complaint 2 – is also straightforward and needs little or no investigation. Resolution is reached at day three of the frontline resolution stage.

Complaint 3 – refers to a complaint that we considered appropriate for frontline resolution. We did not resolve it in the required time of five working days. However, we authorised an extension because there was a clear and demonstrable expectation that the complaint would be satisfactorily resolved within a further five days. We resolved the complaint at the frontline resolution stage in a total of eight days.

Complaint 4 – was suitably complex or serious enough to pass to the investigation stage from the outset. We did not try frontline resolution; rather we investigated the case immediately. We issued a final decision to the customer within the 20-day limit.

Complaint 5 – we considered complaint 5 at the frontline resolution stage but a 5-day extension was authorised. At the end of the frontline stage the customer was still dissatisfied. At their request, we conducted an investigation and issued our final response within 20 working days. Although the end-to-end timeline was 30 working days we still met the combined time targets for frontline resolution and investigation.

Complaint 6 – we considered complaint 6 at both the frontline resolution stage and the investigation stage. We did not complete the investigation within the 20-day limit, so we agreed a revised timescale with the customer for concluding the investigation beyond the 20-day limit.
